BRIEFS OF VARIOUS NEWS

A large barn and several smaller buildings were destroyed by fire on the Michael Wirtz farm, two and a half miles west of Area, in Fremont township, last week. It is estimated that the damage will be in the neighborhood of $10,000.

H. P. Cameron, prominent North Chicago restaurant and bakery man has traded his establishment on Sheridan road for the Strome farm near Gurnee. Mrs. M. G. Strome took possession of the bakery this morning while Cameron who has grown disinterested in the business at North Chicago, has assumed the management of the hundred acre farm.

A report that the Great Lakes naval training station is to close July 1 and be turned into a reclamation camp for the injured war veterans is evidently erroneous. Repeated inquiries at the naval station could not alter the report which came by wire from the capital. The commander said the report was news to him. Capt. D. W. Wurtzbaugh, commandant of the station, who leaves the first of next month to take up duties at San Diego could not be reached at the naval station today.

It is expected that work of paving Sheridan road, between Glen Flora avenue and the north city limits will begin some time in May and preparations are being made by the city council to call for bids on this job by May 1.

The Wisconsin railroad commission has granted a certificate of public convenience and necessity to Walter Carey, of Wilmet, granting him authority to extend his electric system into the town of Wheatland, Kenosha county. This is the first certificate granted by the commission in an electric utility to an individual, the law previously having been interpreted to permit only corporations to receive authorization to operate.

State Health Officer A. J. Markley, Belvidere, came to Grayslake at the instance of local Health Officer Schaffer last week. Upon learning the conditions here, Mr. Markley was very stern in his treatment and the Times believes that it was in the interest of the health of the community that this officer took such steps as he did while here.

Springfield—The boundary line between Illinois and Wisconsin will remain as it is unless a federal commission decides to change it.

The constitutional convention last week killed the article of the boundaries previously drawn by the committee. Delegate Elam L. Clarke, of Waukegan, speaking on the subject declared the article was preferable to eliminate the article entirely from the constitution. Any desired change, he said, should be made by a commission named by Illinois and Wisconsin or a federal commission. The vote to kill the article was adopted unanimously.

The board of supervisors on Wednesday approved the request of States Attorney A. V. Smith to raise the salary of the assistant states attorney to $3,000. The first of this month Assistant States Attorney Albert L. Hall resigned to engage in private practice because the county position required all his time, which he felt was worth more than the salary he received.

Otto Lehman, of the east shore of Fox Lake, will rebuild the riding academy destroyed recently by fire. Work will start within the next two weeks. The building is to be even larger than the one which burned. It will be 100x180 feet, of hollow tile and stuccoed. The work of cleaning up the debris will start about the first part of next week. The cost will be greater than that of the last building which was said to have cost $150,000.

Town Topics

The Board of Trade building has been closed. The members have banded together in a body, and have opened headquarters in front of the new building being erected by Somerville. Each morning at 8 o'clock the "old timers" congregated upon the thoroughfare and never a budge until the day is ended, commenting for and against the way the building is being "done."

We might delay the village expenses somewhat by sub-leasing the Board of Trade building until the completion of the new bakery.

One old gent came about three minutes late the other morning and one bricklayer had laid about half dozen bricks. The old gent wanted him to take them down and lay them over again, because he wasn't there in time to see them laid.

Another fellow got peeved because he couldn't watch the bricklayer and the concrete mixer at the same time. It made his head dizzy turning it back and forth from one side of the building to the other.

One of the day laborers said he could not work because every time he looked up all he could see was bewhiskered faces staring at him.

The village marshal has been nominated as a candidate to give roll call each morning, because it wouldn't be right to finish the building with any of the "regular" spectators absent.

Contracts should be let to build a temporary sidewalk around the crowd, although some suggestions have been made as to a bridge over the "ex sidewalk." But why not just build a reviewing stand for the "judges."

In Minnesota, recently, a jury composed of seven women and five men failed to agree on a verdict and were locked up two days and two nights before an agreement could be reached.

The judge, city, state and every department of justice were criticized because of the fact there were no provisions made for dividing the men and women during rest periods and nights.

Can you imagine the foreman of a jury coming in after spending the two days and nights locked up, and rendering a verdict of "not guilty."

Players of last year's Antioch team and several new players of exceptional ability have signified their intention of playing this season in Antioch uniforms. Sibley-Hawkins Gets Decision Over Chas. E. Bairstow

The jury in the case of Sibley and Hawkins vs. Charles Bairstow received the evidence in the case at about 5:30 Tuesday evening, and battled until 1 o'clock Wednesday morning when five verdicts were returned. The final settlement as made by the jury orders Bairstow to pay the Sibley and Hawkins people, Antioch auto dealers, the sum of $4,600.72, and to turn over to them four second hand cars that Bairstow had taken in trade for other cars. Bairstow in turn was found to be the owner of a Nash sedan and Jordan sedan. The jury found that the writ of attachment issued by the Sibley and Hawkins company against Bairstow was unnecessary, and the writ was ignored.

Attorney E. V. Orvis, for Bairstow, immediately motioned for a new trial.

Governor Designates Dates for Arbor and Bird Day

Governor Len Small today issued the following proclamation for the observance of Arbor and Bird days on April 14 and October 27.

"The laws of Illinois provide that the governor shall, annually, in the spring, designate a day or days to be known as

"ARBOR AND BIRD DAY"

"The trees and the birds of any land constitute a part of its natural wealth, and their aesthetic value is highly as important to the people as their economic value. They minister to and delight the senses. Our trees preserve our lands from erosion, they furnish us with the fruits of the earth and with lumber to house us and with fuel to warm us, and their grateful shade shields us from the blazing sun of summer. Our birds, subsisting largely upon insect pests, protect the growing trees and crops and thus add materially to the wealth of the state, besides contributing to our pleasure by their bright plumage and sweet songs. It is quite essential that our youth from time to time be impressed with the necessity of propagating and fostering these important natural resources.

"Now, therefore, I, Len Small, governor of Illinois, by virtue of the authority in me vested by the statutes, do hereby designate Friday, April the fourteenth, and Friday, October the twenty-seventh, of the present year, as Arbor and Bird days, to be observed throughout the state by planting and care of trees, shrubs, and vines about the homes, on the farms, along the highways and about public grounds within this state, and as days on which to hold appropriate exercises in the public schools and elsewhere to emphasize the importance to our state of the propagation of trees, shrubs and vines, and the preservation of our native birds."

ISAACS IS BIG FAVORITE

An exceedingly light vote was cast at the Primary election in Antioch on Tuesday. Only 28 votes being cast, three of which were women's votes. Four of the ballots were thrown out because they were marked wrong.

Ray Webb received highest vote among the Village trustees nominated, where he polled eighteen out of a possible twenty-four. William Rosing and W. H. Osmond were tied for second honors with sixteen votes each.

A Man To His Mate

By J. ALLEN DUNN

COPYRIGHT BOBBS MERRILL CO.

LUND AND CARLSEN.

Gynopolis—Latter on the San Francisco water front, John Rainey, newspaper reporter, is accosted by a giant blind man, who asks Rainey to lead him aboard the sailing schooner "Karluik." In the cabin they find Captain Simms and a man named Carlsen. Simms recognizes the blind man, calling him Jim Lund. Lund accuses Simms of abandoning him, blind, on an ice floe and denounces him. Simms denies the charge, but Lund refuses to be pacified. He declares his intention of accompanying the "Karluik" on its expedition north, where it is going in quest of a gold field which Lund has discovered. Peggy, Simms' daughter, is aboard, and defends her father. Carlsen, who is a physician as well as first mate, drugs Rainey. Awakening from his stupor, Rainey finds himself at sea. Carlsen informs him he has been kidnapped. He offers Rainey a share of the gold, and Rainey is forced to declare himself satisfied. Lund gives him a brief account of a former expedition of the "Karluik," tells him he distrusts Carlsen, and suggests a "partnership." Rainey is made second mate. Captain Simms is ill and the navigation is entirely in the hands of Carlsen. At the latter's suggestion a shooting match is staged and the seal hunters exhaust their ammunition. Carlsen shows his skill with the pistol and Lund does some astonishing shooting "by sound." Sandy, the ship's boy, is swept overboard and is rescued by Rainey, who thus wins Peggy's admiration. The captain gets worse. Sandy tells how Carlsen is stirring up trouble over the division of the gold. Carlsen draws a gun on Rainey, who overpowers him. Tamada, the mysterious Japanese cook, declares himself neutral.

"All right, sir," Rainey answered, getting a thrill at this first actual intimation of the meeting. Hansen, it seemed, was not to be one of the representatives of the seamen. And Carlsen had been smart enough to forestall Lund's demand for Rainey by taking some of the wind out of the giant's sails and doing the unexpected. Unless the hunters had suggested that Rainey be present. But that was hardly likely, considering that he was to be left out of the deal.

"In just what capacity are you called in this conference?" Lund asked, when Carlsen notified him in turn. "The skipper ain't dead, is he?"

"I represent the captain, Lund," replied the doctor. "He entirely approves of what I am about to suggest to you and the men. In fact I have his signature to a document that I hope you will sign also. It will be greatly to your interest to do so. I am in present charge of the "Karluik."

"You ain't a regular member of this expedition," objected Lund, stolidly. "Neither am I a member of the crew, just now. But the skipper's my partner in this deal, signed, sealed and recorded. Before I go to enny meeting I'd like to have a talk with him personally. That's fair enough, ain't it?"

Several of the hunters had gathered about, and Lund's question seemed a general appeal. Carlsen shrugged his shoulders.

"If you had your eyesight," he said almost brutally, "you could soon see that the skipper was in no condition to discuss matters, much less be present."

"Here's my eyesight," countered Lund. "Mr. Rainey here. Let him see the skipper and ask him a question or two?"

"What kind of a question? I'm asking as his doctor, Lund."

"For one thing if he's read the paper you say he signed, I want to be sure of that. An' I don't make it enny of yore bizness, Carlsen, what I want to say to my partner, by proxy or otherwise. Second thing, I'd like to be sure he's still alive. As for yore 'standin' as his doctor, all I've got to say is that yore a d-d pore doctor, so far as the skipper's concerned, ennyway."

The two men stood facing each other, Carlsen looking evilly at the giant, whose black glasses warned off his glance. It was wasting looks to glare at a blind man. Equally to sneer. But the bout between the two was timed now, and both were casting aside any veneer of diplomacy, their enmity manifesting itself in the raw. The issue was growing tense.

Lund fancied that Carlsen was not entirely sure of his following, and relied upon Lund's indignant refusal of terms to back up his plans of getting rid of him decisively.

CHAPTER VII.

The Show-Down.

"Rainey can see the skipper," said Carlsen, carelessly.

"All right," said Lund. "Will you do that, Rainey? Now?" And Rainey had a fleeting fancy that the giant winked one of his blind eyes at him, though the black lenses were deceiving.

He went below immediately and rapped on the door, a little surprised to see the girl appear in the opening. The drawn expression of her face, the strained faint smile with which she greeted him, the hopeless look in her eyes, startled him.

"I wanted to see your father," he said in a low voice.

She told him to enter.

"He is in a stupor," she said. "He has been that way since last night, following a collapse. I can barely find his pulse, but his breath shows on this."

She produced a small mirror, little larger than a dollar, and held it before her father's lips. When she took it away Rainey saw a trace of moisture. "Carlsen cannot rouse him?" he asked.

"Cannot—or will not," she answered in a voice that held a hard quality for all its despondency.

"Lately the doctor has seemed uncertain. He talks of perverted nerve functions, and he has obtained a tremendous influence over father."

"You heard what he said when—the night he tried to shoot you? You see, I am trusting you to all this, Mr. Rainey. I must trust some one. If I don't I can't stand it. I think I shall go mad, sometimes. The doctor has changed. It is as if he was a dual personality—like Jekyll and Hyde—and now he is always Hyde. He said last night that he could save father—or—that he would let father die. I told him it was sheer murder! He laughed. He said he would save him—for a price."

She stopped, and Rainey supplied the gap, sure that he was right.

"If you would marry him?"

The girl nodded. "Father will do anything he tells him. I sometimes think he tortures father and only relieves him when father promises what he wants. Otherwise I could not understand. Last night father asked me to do this thing. He told me he looked upon the doctor as a son, that it would make him happy for me to marry him—now. That he would perform the ceremony. That he did not think he would live long and he wanted to see me with a postscript."

"It was horrible. What shall I do?"

"Miss Simms," said Rainey, "your father is not in his right mind or he would see Carlsen as you do, as I do. Carlsen's brain is turned with the lure of the gold. If he marries you, I believe it is only for your share, for what you will get from your father. It cannot be right to do a wrong thing. No good could come from it. But—something may happen this morning—I cannot tell you what. I do not know, except that Lund is to face Carlsen. It may change matters."

"Lund," she said scornfully. "What can he do? And he accused my father of deserting him. I—"

A knock came at the door, and it started to open. Carlsen entered.

"Ah," he said. "I trust I have not disturbed you. I had no idea I should interrupt a tete-a-tete. Are you satisfied as to the captain's condition, Mr. Rainey?"

Rainey went on deck, raging but impotent. He told Lund briefly of the talk between him and Peggy Simms, and described the general symptoms of the skipper's strange malady. It was nine o'clock, an hour to the meeting. He went down to his own room and sat on the bunk, smoking, trying to piece up the puzzle. If Carlsen was a potential murderer, if he intended to let Simms die, why should he want to marry the girl? He thought he solved that issue.

As his wife Carlsen would retain her share. If he gave her up, it would go into the common purse. But, if he expected to trick the men out of it all, that would be unnecessary. Did he really love the girl? Or was his lust for gold mingled with a passion for possession of her? He might know that the girl would kill herself before she would submit to dishonor. Perhaps he knew she had the means!

One thing became paramount—to save Peggy Simms. Lund might fight for the gold; Rainey would battle for the girl's sanctity. And, armed with that resolve, Rainey went out into the main cabin.

Carlsen took the head of the table. Lund faced him at the other end. All six of the hunters, as privileged characters, were present, but only three of the seamen, awkward and diffident at being aft. The nine, with Rainey, ranged themselves on either side of the table, five and five, with Rainey on Lund's right. The girl was not present. Yet her share was an important factor.

Lund sat with folded arms, his great body relaxed. Now that the table was set, the cards all dealt, and the first play about to be made, the giant shed his tenseness. Even his grim face softened a trifle. He seemed to regard the affair with a certain amount of humor, coupled with the zest of a gambler who loves the game whether the stakes are for death or dollars.

Carlsen had a paper under his hand, but deferred its reading until he had addressed the meeting.

"A ship," he said, "is a little community, a world in itself. To its safety every member is a necessity, the lookout as much as the man at the wheel, the common seaman, the navigator. And, when a ship is engaged in a certain calling, those who are hired as experts in that line are equally essential with the rest. Each man's responsibility being equal, his reward should be also equal.

"Payment for all services comes on this voyage from an uncertain amount of gold that Nature, mother of us all, and therefore intending that all her children shall share her heritage, has washed up on a beach from some deep-sea vein and thus deposited upon an uncharted, unclaimed island. It is discovered by an Indian, the discovery is handed on to another."

"Meanin' me," Lund seemed to be enjoying himself. Despite the fact that Carlsen was presiding and most evidently assumed the attributes of leader, despite the fact that ten of the twelve at the table were arrayed against him, with the rest of the seamen behind them, Lund was decidedly enjoying himself.

"Share and share alike," he said. "I've got yore drift, Carlsen. Let's get down to brass tacks. The idea is to divvy the gold into equal parts, ain't it? How does she split? There's twenty-five souls aboard. Does that mean you split the heap into a hundred parts an' each one gets four?"

"No," it was Deming who answered. "It don't. The Jap don't come in, for one."

"A cook ain't a brother?"

"Not when he's got a yellow skin," answered Deming. "We'll take up a collection for Sandy. Rainey ain't in on the deal. We split it just twenty-two ways. What have you got to say about it?"

His tone was truculent, and Carlsen did not appear disposed to check him. He appeared not quite certain of the temper of the hunters.

"You figger we're all equal aboard," said Lund slowly, "leavin' out Mr. Rainey, Tamada an' Sandy. You an' me, an' Carlsen an' Harris there"—he nodded toward one of the seamen delegates who listened with his slack mouth agape, scratching himself under the armpit—"are all equal?"

Deming cast a glance at Harris and, for just a moment, hesitated.

Harris, squirming under the look of Deming, which was aped by the sudden scrutiny of all the hunters, found speech: "How in h—l did you know I was here?" he demanded of Lund. "I ain't opened my mouth yet!"

"That ain't the truth, Harris," replied Lund composedly. "It's allus open. But if you want to know, I smelled ye."

There was a guffaw at the sally. Carlsen's voice stopped it.

"I'll answer the question, Lund. Yes, we're all equal. The world is not a democracy, Harris, so far, hasn't had a chance to get the equal share that belongs to him by rights. That's what I meant by sayin' that the "Karluik" was a little world of its own. We're all equal on board."

"Except Rainey, Tamada an' Sandy. Seem to me yore argumint's got holes in it, Carlsen."

"We are waiting to know whether you agree with us?" replied Carlsen. His voice had altered quality. It held the direct challenge. Lund accepted it.

"I don't," he answered dryly. "There ain't enny one of you my equal, an' you've showed it. You had to band together in a pack, like a flock of sheep, with Carlsen for shepherd. I'm talkin'," he went on in a tone that suddenly leaped to thunder. "None of you have got the brains of Carlsen, heez he had to put this scheme inter yore noodies. Deming, you know d-n well you play better poker than I do, an' you agreed to this becoz you figger you'd win most of the gold afore the yinque is over. The rest of you suckers listened becoz some one tells you you are goin' to get more than what's rightly comin' to you."

"This gold is mine by right of discovery. I lose my ship through bad luck, an' I make a deal whereby the skipper gets the same as I do, an' the ship, which is the same as his daughter, gets almost as much. You men were offered a share on top of yore wages if you wanted to take the chance—two shares to the hunters. It was d-d liberal, an' you grabbed at it. I got left on the ice, blind on a breakin' floe, an' you salled off an' grabbed a handful or so of gold, enough to set you crazy."

"What in blazes would you know what to do with it, enny of you? Spill it all along the Barb'ry coast, or gamble it off to Deming. Is there one of you 'ud have got off that floe an' blind as I was, turned up ag'in? Not one of ye. An' when I did show you got sore becoz you'd figgered there 'ud be more with me away."

"A fine lot of skunks. You can take yore d-d bit of paper an' light yore pipes with it, for all of me. To b—l with it!"

"Shut up!" His voice topped the murmurs at the table. Carlsen sat quiet, sometimes licking his lips gently, listening to Lund as he might have listened to the rantings of a melodramatic actor. But Rainey sensed that he was making a mistake. He was letting Lund go too far. The men were listening to Lund, and he knew that the giant was talking for a specific purpose. Just to what end he could not guess. The big booming voice held them, while it lashed them.

"Equal to me? Bah! I'm a man. Yore d-d lot of fools. Talk about me bein' blind. It was ice-blind got me. Then ephthalmy, matterin' up my eyes. It's gotcha, ain't it? Yore cave-fish, a lot of blind suckers."

He leaned over the table pointing a massive square finger, clutched with red wool direct at Carlsen, as if he had been leveling a weapon.

"Carlsen's a fake! He's got you hippped. He thinks he's boss, becoz he's the only navigator of yore crowd. I ain't overlooked that card, Carlsen. That ain't the only string he's got on ye. Nor the three shares he expects to pull down. He made you pore suckers fire off all yore shells; he found out you ain't got a gun left among you that's enny more use than a club. He's got a gun, an' he showed you how he could use it. He's sittin' back terkin' at the beach of you!"

The men stirred. Rainey saw Carlsen's grin disappear. He dropped the paper. His face paled, the veins showed suddenly like purple veins in dirty marble.

"I've got that gun yet, Lund," he snarled.

Lund laughed, the ring of it so confident that the men glanced from him to Carlsen nervously.

"Yore a fake, Carlsen," he said. "And I've got yore number! To b—l with you an' yore pop-gun. You ain't even a doctor. I saw real doctors ashore about my eyes. Nympholepsia, they call snow-blindness. I'll bet you never heard of it. Yore only a woman-connin' dope-shooter! Else you'd have known that nympholepsia ain't permanent! I've bin gettin' my sight back ever since I left Seattle. An' now, d-n you for a scoldy-hearted, slimy-souled fakir, stand up an' say yore my equal!"

He stood up himself, towering above the rest as they rose from their chairs, tearing the black glasses from his eyes and flinging them at Carlsen, who was forced to throw up a hand to ward them off. Rainey got one glimpse of the giant's eyes. They were gray-blue, the color of agateware, hard as steel, implacable.

Carlsen swept aside the spectacles and they shattered on the floor as he leaped up and the automatic shone in his hand. Lund had folded his arms above his great chest. He laughed again, and his arms opened.

In an instant Rainey caught the object of Lund's speechmaking. He had done it to enrage Carlsen beyond endurance, to make him draw his gun. Giant as he was, he moved with the grace of a panther, with a swiftness too fast for the eye to register. Something flashed in his right hand, a gun, that he had drawn from a holster slung over his left breast.

The shots blended. Lund stood there erect, uninjured. A red blotch showed between Carlsen's eyes. He slumped down into his chair, his arms clutched the table, his gun falling from his nerveless hand, his forehead striking the wood like the sound of an auctioneer's gavel. Lund had beaten him to the draw.

Lund, no longer a blind Samson, with contempt in his eagle eyes, surveyed the scattering group of men who stared at the dead man dully, as if gripped by the exhibition of a miracle.

"You murderer!" she cried. "Lund grinned at her, but there was no laughter in his eyes."

CALUMET BAKING POWDER SAVES THREE WAYS

—A moderate priced Baking Powder of great merit. Honestly made. Honestly sold. Economical in every way. Every particle is full of actual leavening value. A full money's worth.

—You save time when you use it. Calumet is all baking powder. It begins to raise bakings the instant they are put into the oven. You don't have to keep "peeping" to see if bakings are all right. You know they are. Calumet is sure—never fails. That's economy. And true economy—in cost—in use—in time.

One trial will prove it and show you in results why millions of shrewd, thrifty housewives prefer Calumet to all other brands.

—The unfailing strength of Calumet guarantees perfect results. Not only saves flour—sugar—eggs, etc.—but saves Baking Powder. You use only a teaspoonful—you use two teaspoonfuls or more of many other brands.

Calumet contains only such ingredients as have been approved officially by the U. S. Food Authorities.

AN EARLY START IN PAPER BOXES

Convenience Available in Various Sizes; Can Be Unfolded
Away From Roots.

THE PLANT NOT DISTURBED

Arrangement of Container Saves Injury to Growth; Can Be Placed in Ground Under the Most Favorable Conditions.

No greater gardening convenience has been devised in many years than the paper flower pots now available in various sizes which can be unfolded away from the roots of the plant when it comes time to transplant. By the use of these paper pots, which are fairly durable, plenty lasting enough to raise seedlings to sufficient size, great advantages can be secured in growing such vegetables as peppers, egg plants and cucumbers and melons for an early start. One or two seeds to a pot of the two-inch size may be planted and the stronger of the two seedlings retained to grow along.

For plants which cannot be transplanted readily if the roots are disturbed in the operation these paper pots are ideal. If cucumbers can be given two or three weeks' start by this method, they are in much better shape to withstand the ravages of the early bugs, which annually take heavy toll of the seedling plants in the open ground and make it necessary to plant more seeds to the hill than could be grown should they all survive.

In the larger-sized paper pots, gladiolus bulbs as well as tuberoses may be sprouted and placed in the ground with an advantage of a month's growth over the earliest date it would be possible to plant them in the open. The pots are so cheap in price that they can be thrown away after using with no real loss.

One precaution is necessary in using these pots. They should not be allowed to stand in water or the bottoms will rot out while the sides remain intact. It is necessary to provide drainage in all but the smallest sizes with pieces of broken earthen flower pots, crockery or a few pebbles.

Castor beans may be given a fine start with these paper pots which will bring them to maturity proportionally much earlier than if planted in the open. Planting the seeds in these little pots saves the work of transplanting which will become imperative if the seed is planted in the usual way in a seed box indoors or in rows in a hotheb or cold frame.—National Garden Bureau.

ART OF GROWING RADISHES

One of the Earliest Products of the Home Garden is One of Easiest to Grow.

The radish patch usually is the first to be planted by the majority of home gardeners. The product in most instances is the first to grace the family table. The United States Department of Agriculture tells how:

For the home garden, radish seed should be sown in the open ground as soon as the soil is moderately warm. Plant in drills 12 to 18 inches apart, and as soon as the plants are up thin them slightly in order to prevent crowding. Radishes require to be grown on a quick, rich soil, and some of the earlier sorts can be matured in two or three weeks after planting. If the radishes grow slowly they will have a pungent flavor and will not be fit for table use. For a constant supply successive plantings should be made every two weeks, as the roots lose their crispness and delicate flavor if allowed to remain long in the open ground. As a rule a large percentage of radish seed will grow, and it is often possible by careful sowing to avoid the necessity of thinning, the first radishes being pulled as soon as they are sufficient size for table use, thus making room for those that will mature later.

DAIRY FACTS

BREEDING HELPS PRODUCERS

Better Sires Increase Average as Well as Total Production and Increase Profits.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are several ways of improving a dairy herd. Elimination of low producers increases average production. It may decrease total production, but usually increases net profit. The experience of successful dairy men and of the Department of Agriculture has shown this. Better feeding of the cows already on the farm increases average and total production, and may increase net profit. Use of better sires increases average as well as total production, and always increases net profit. It has been found.

All dairy-herd improvement due to better breeding tends to increase profit to the producer and decrease cost to the consumer. It is one of the ways by which the world may become richer without decreasing the prosperity of any individual in it.

Well-formed, registered bulls from proved sires and advanced registry dams are usually fit to head even high-producing dairy herds. When such bulls have proved sons and advanced-registry daughters, their value becomes exceedingly great because of the certainty that they will transmit in large measure to their offspring the high-producing qualities of their ancestors. So far as possible only such bulls should be chosen to head herds of selected, high-producing, registered dairy cattle. In ordinary dairy practice, however, the bull goes to the block before the production records of his daughters are available. In that way many excellent bulls every year are lost to the dairy business.

Purebred Bulls Transmit High-Producing

CONGESTION OF COW'S UDDER

Comparatively Simple Trouble Brought on by Improper Feeding—Not Hard to Cure.

Congestion of the udder is in itself a comparatively simple trouble brought on by a combination of heavy feeding, consequent high condition, and a sluggish lymphatic system. The former is to be desired, but the latter is not. Congestion will usually yield readily to a preparatory dose of salts and laxative feed, together with an occasional ounce dose of saltpetre in the drinking water. Exercise, particularly previous to milking, but after milking as well, is also beneficial.

To prevent congestion of the udder developing into inflammation and garget, avoid standing cow in draughts and milk often, rubbing the udder gently with camphorated ointment after each milking. If there is any indication of more serious trouble developing, give the cow a strong laxative (Epsom salts 1½ pounds, molasses 1 cup, and ginger 1 ounce), followed after purging ceases by daily ounce dose of saltpetre, at the same time bathing the udder with hot water for 15 to 20-minute periods, finally drying it and rubbing with camphorated ointment and petrolatum.

GIVE CALVES GOOD EXERCISE

Necessary to Keep Young Animals in Best of Health—Have Yard Protected.

To keep calves in the best of health and to permit of a proper development of the lungs and chest they should be permitted to have outdoor exercise even in cold weather. It is well to have a yard which is protected from both the north and west winds if possible so that calves may be turned out in winter, but on cold days it is not advisable to leave calves out long enough to become chilled.

Imperative Needs of Cow.

Pregnant cows need succulent or laxative feed and exercise to keep their bowels active. If they are to escape milk fever and caked or congested udders, have strong calves and plenty of milk at calving time.

Cows Need Full Ration.

It is a mistake to feed just enough to keep the cow nourished; she needs a full ration so her body requirements will not use all the nourishment, leaving nothing for promoting the milk flow.

HOW TO GROW PEPPERS

Seeds of peppers should be sown in a hotheb or in a box in the house about 8 weeks before the time for setting the plants in the garden. The plants are tender and should not be transplanted until the ground is warm and all danger of frost is past. Set the plants 15 to 18 inches apart in rows 2½ to 3 feet apart. The cultivation and treatment of peppers should be the same as for tomatoes and eggplants. There are a large number of varieties of peppers, including the sweet kinds and the hot peppers.

PLAN FOR FRUIT IN HOME GARDEN

Trees and Bearing Bushes
Should Be Raised in Addition to the Vegetables.

GROW CROPS BETWEEN TREES

Strawberries, Raspberries, Blackberries, Gooseberries, Currants and Others May Occupy Same Space and Do Well.

The more general planting of both standard and small fruits in addition to the home vegetable garden would contribute materially to the health and pleasure of the average family and furnish a supply of very desirable fruit and fruit products at relatively small cost. In many localities it is extremely difficult to secure a continuous supply of fruits in pleasing variety by purchasing on the market, and one of the most important features of the plan for the home fruit plantation is the selection of kinds of fruits and varieties of those kinds which will do well in the given locality and which will serve best the purpose for which they are desired.

The home fruit plot will necessarily be planned from the standpoint of the available space, the soil and climatic limitations, and the needs of the family throughout the year. In many cases it may be feasible to grow all the fruit needed, but only that which can be most readily produced. Among the fruits that may be grown throughout the greater part of the country are apples, pears, peaches, plums, strawberries, blackberries and dewberries, raspberries, currants, cherries, guavas, apricots, figs and citrus fruits are more or less restricted to special localities. In colder sections the winters are too severe for peaches and all the fruits requiring a warm climate, while in the warmer sections, apples, currants, gooseberries, raspberries and certain varieties of several of the other fruits fail because they cannot withstand the long hot summers and winters.

The plan of the home fruit garden, will, therefore, depend largely upon the kind of fruits adapted to the locality. On the whole, however, the plantings should be so arranged that the larger growing trees such as apple, peach and pear will interfere the least with the cultivation of the smaller fruits or the vegetable garden. In some of the most successful home fruit gardens the larger trees are headed rather high, that is, 5 or 6 feet to the lower branches, and a row of small fruits are grown directly in the row of fruit trees. Between the rows of fruit trees, raspberries, blackberries, dewberries and strawberries are planted in rows which are about 8 or 9 feet apart. The vegetables are then grown in the space between these rows of berries. Peach trees are, as a rule, planted as fillers between apple and pear trees. Where the area is extremely limited the semi-dwarf varieties of apples are sometimes recommended. Care should be taken, however, to provide plenty of distance between the large-growing trees, say 40 to 48 feet for apples and 20 to 30 feet for peaches, pears and cherries.

Apples, pears, cherries and plums may be planted as combination fruit and shade trees, and by heading them 5 to 7 feet above the ground, a lawn may be maintained underneath them. Plum trees are particularly adapted to planting in a poultry yard, but must be headed reasonably high and the trunks protected by wire netting until the trees are four or five years old.

RESOLUTIONS

Some Antioch people may have been too busy a few weeks ago to make New Year resolutions, or they might not have had time to frame a set of good resolutions to guide them through this year. For their convenience, and believing they will appreciate them, we have prepared the following, which we suggest as a code worth posting up where you can see it several times each day:

I will smile at least once a day, and twice on Sundays.

I will attend and support church, for my own and the other fellows good.

I will make my family happy, because a happy will add to my happiness.

I will love myself less and my neighbors more.

I will plant a tree, a few shrubs and a lot of good deeds.

I will not kick unless I know what I am kicking about.

I will vote my own vote and run my own business.

I will subscribe for my home-town paper—read it—and see that it is always paid for, at least one year ahead.

CHICKEN FENCE WIRE HANDY

Small Gardeners Will Find the Woven Two-Inch Mesh Valuable—Takes Place of Stakes.

Many vegetable and flowering vines can be successfully grown on chicken fence wire. In the fall the wire can be taken down and used for succeeding years for similar purposes. It will enable the small gardener to raise more vegetables and flowers than if they were allowed to lie on the ground and spread out over valuable space.

Cucumbers, lima and climbing string beans, nasturtiums and numerous other vegetables of spreading variety, as well as almost any vine-flowering plants can be successfully trained on the wire trellis permitting of the use of the ground space ordinarily covered by vines being used for something else. Give the vine plants plenty of air and sunshine and water when needed, and they will give an excellent accounting of themselves on the wire.

MAKE GARDEN PERMANENT

With Little Attention Hardy Plants Will Produce Crops That May Be Dependable Upon.

A bed of asparagus is known to have given continuous service for more than 30 years, and asparagus is one of the first of the spring vegetables. A row of blackberries along a garden fence has produced abundant crops for 12 successive years. A few hills of rhubarb have provided a delicious sauce and helped with the making of pies season after season, with very little cost or attention. Strawberries require more care, but they furnish the first ripe fruit in the spring, and a very small plot of ground in one corner of the garden will supply the family, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

WATCH FOR PLANT LICE

If you would be sure of getting a crop of egg-plants, cucumbers, cantaloupes, as well as other garden vegetables, watch for plant lice. A nicotine spray will get them, but don't wait until the under sides of the leaves are covered before you begin the treatment.

SUNDAY SERVICES:

Sunday School 9:45
Morning Service 11:00
Epworth League 7:00
Evening Service 7:45

Last Sunday morning the attendance was excellent and the interest was very deep in the lesson of "The Recognition of The Holy Spirit." It was shown that the one great truth all must come to realize more fully, and more constantly is that no one is left alone in his struggles with the great spirit fiend called Satan; that there is an Almighty spirit who dwells in us and is always ready to break forth into irresistible action which can and will overthrow all the power of the devil, if we but remember that the Almighty spirit is present and call on Him for help; that this eternal, almighty spirit is the holy spirit; that He is God.

The conclusion was that, if we always remember the holy spirit, always remember that He is in us, and always trust Him and ask for help, we shall never find ourselves helpless or alone, but always we shall find that the very might of God is actually in us to give us instant and complete victory over Satan and over every temptation he can bring.

The evening service was given to promotion of the more diligent and earnest study of the bible, that by it we may be saved from sinning against God. The text was "Thy Word Have I Hid in My Heart That I Might Not Sin Against Thee." The pastor said in part: "The man who uttered these words was a really religious man: He actually did love God. He was speaking to God when he uttered these words. He told God that he was truly anxious not to sin against Him. He made it plain that he was so anxious not to sin against God that he had done something to keep from it. And the thing he said he had done to keep from sinning against God was to hide God's word in his heart. That meant that this man had pored over the book of God, dug out its rich, hidden treasures day by day and year after year, saturated his life with its precious wisdom, drank in its spirit of unswerving righteousness and radiant holiness until his whole being was

SOY BEANS FOR HAY

The soy bean has not been used very extensively in Lake county but due to the fact that it is one of our richest protein producing plants it should be one of our most profitable crops.

It is adapted for use as a hay crop, for seed to be ground for feeding, and planted with corn for the silo.

Much of the success in growing the crop depends on getting the right variety, one that will mature in this climate. The Ito Sau, Manchou and Mongol are adapted to our latitude and will mature here.

On soil that is free from weeds and fairly mellow the best way to plant suffused with the splendor of God's word so that he just lived it out. He knew what sin was by the word of God. He knew he did not have to sin because he knew the word of God. He knew how to keep from sinning by his constant study of the word of God. He knew where and how to obtain power to keep from sinning by his unceasing meditation on the word of God. And there is no other way any one of us can keep from actually sinning against God. And if we will examine our lives we will find that those times in our lives when we have not been careful to study God's word daily have been periods when we have not cared, as we ought to care, whether we sin against God or not. Let us be really anxious not to sin against God, and let us show it by making earnest study of His word daily, thus hiding His word in our hearts.

There will be special music at the regular services next Sunday, both morning and evening.

Reports of prosperity and happiness as result of tithing keep coming in. More folks in Sunday school last Sunday than the Sunday before. Let everybody get the habit.

The theme for next Sunday morning will be "Go To Church." The evening theme will be "Wonder Stories from Everywhere."

Spiritual revolutions are being worked in many lives by the practice of keeping the morning watch, fifteen minutes or more each day for prayer and bible study.

them is to drill with a wheat drill at the rate of a bushel or a bushel and a peck to the acre. The date of planting is about the same time as corn planting.

If possible the seed bed should be worked up far enough ahead of time so a second harrowing just before planting will kill any weeds that may have started.

Plant the beans shallow, not over 1½ inches deep, this is important. One or two light cultivations with a weeder or a rotary hoe after the beans are well up will kill more of the weeds and give the beans a good start.

Cut for hay when the first leaves begin to turn brown. If cutting is delayed too long the leaves will fall off, the beans pods burst and the seed will shatter.

The hay is handled about like heavy clover but takes a little more time in the windrow or cock to cure.

The beans alone are nearly equal to cotton seed meal for feeding cattle and make a good substitute for tankage in feeding hogs.

GRAINS NOT GRAMS

The worm medicine recommended for pigs as given in last week's paper should read two grains of calomel, santone, aloin and sodium bicarbonate instead of two grams.

COSTS OF DAIRY FEEDS

Most feeds have advanced some in price during the past month. However, there has been no great change in the relative price of feeds.

Feed	Cost per 100 lbs. Digestible Nutrients
Wheat Bran (12.5% protein) ..	$2.22
Gluten Feed (21.5 protein) ..	1.96
Old Process Oil Meal (30% protein) ..	3.11
Cotton Seed Meal (41% protein) ..	2.81
Corn (shelled) ..	1.10
Oats (No. 4) ..	1.54

The home grown feeds continue to be the cheapest. Due to the fact that there is so much difference between the price of the high protein feeds and the price of corn and oats, there is a tendency on the part of many dairymen to use little or no protein concentrates. The result is that wider rations are fed and the production is decreased. It seems advisable, under present conditions to add some high protein concentrates to the home grown feeds, especially for the higher producing cows. Where plenty of good alfalfa hay is available the concentrated protein feed can be greatly reduced. Of the high protein concentrates, cotton seed meal continues to be the cheapest source of protein.

Keep Good Cows and Give Them a Chance

The production of most dairy herds can be greatly improved by a good systematic culling out of the poor producers. Production records should be the guide and each cow judged according to her ability. A considerable amount of milk which is produced at a little or no profit would be taken off an already over-supplied market. The dairymen would work with smaller but more efficient herds and would obtain more satisfactory results.

C. S. Rhode, Dairy Ext. Dept.

Notice that protein feeds are all the highest in price. Production cost can be cheapened by growing more of the protein at home. More clover, alfalfa, sweet clover and soy beans will replace much of the high priced oil meal, cotton seed meal and bran.

These crops are all legumes and soil builders.

Strawberry Plants Available to Boys and Girls

The plan of the strawberry project has been outlined through the department of horticulture in which a large supply of excellent strawberry plants has been made available at a very reasonable cost. These will be distributed as follows:

1. Eligibility—Any boy or girl in the state between the ages of 12 and 20 years who will plant, care for, and keep records of the production of his bed, during the second season may receive plants.

2. Variety—Plants will be of Dunlap variety, which is the variety best adapted to Illinois conditions.

Cost—60¢ per 100 plants; $1.10 per 200 plants; $1.75 per 500 plants, and $3.50 per 1,000 plants post paid.

4. All orders should be in as soon as possible. Orders may be sent to the Lake County Farm Bureau, Libertyville, in which case a money order or check payable to the Farm Bureau, must accompany the order.

When all individual orders are in a club order will be sent for the total amount. The reason for the department of horticulture offering this plan is to increase the growing of small fruits on the farm.

Strawberries are one of the easiest fruits to start. A large bed can be started at a cost no greater than that necessary to start a few trees or bushes of other fruits. The plants come into bearing quickly and a small patch will furnish berries for a large family with a surplus left to can or sell. Even a patch of 100 plants is capable of producing from 25 to 50 gallons of fruit when properly cared for and will take about 1-72 of an acre to plant them.

Orders should be mailed to the Farm Bureau at once. Cut out and mail the blank below.

Please order Dunlap strawberry plants for which I enclose $.....

I will plant care for and keep a record of production on my strawberry bed.

THE SCREEN VERSUS THE PULPIT

While it is no easy thing for an author to endorse the pictured version of his story, it is rather exceptional when an author who is at the same time a minister of the gospel, declares that the screen is an infinitely better medium for reaching the public than is the pulpit.

Yet that, according to Henry Alexander MacRae, the well known director, is exactly what Ralph Connor has said. Ralph Connor, which is the pen name of the Rev. Dr. C. W. Gordon, wrote a very large number of novels, prominent among them "The Sky Pilot," "Black Rock," "The Prospector," "Cameron of the Royal Mounted," and "The Foreigner." "The Foreigner" was made into a picture by Director MacRae and under its new title, "Gods Crusible"—will be shown next Friday and Saturday at the Majestic theatre. It is a Madal ovehdnapk ync theatre. It is a Hodgkinson release and the cast includes * Wilton Lackaye, Gaston Glass, Gladys Coburn, Bradley Barwer, Kate Price and many other prominent players.

One day, two years later, a wagon show visited Wellington, and Stone, unknown to the manager, ran up the tight-rope outside the side-show tent and stood there, poised in the air while the manager shouted to him to come down before he killed himself. Stone replied that he would come down if the manager would give him a job with the circus and the manager gladly promised. That same night the boy left home with the parental blessings and for several seasons toured the west.

In his most recent screen production, "Billy Jim," Mr. Stone brings into play all his skill at roping and riding and shooting. "Billy Jim" is the feature attraction at the Crystal theatre, Saturday, March 18.

STONE IS GREATEST STAGE ENTERTAINER

Foremost Individual Attraction in the World According to Managers,
Appears in R-C Picture

Fred Stone has been called "the world's greatest entertainer," and he fully deserves the title.

His fame on the musical comedy stage is reflected in the throngs that pass into the theatres in which he appears and he goes steadily on, year after year, drawing capacity audiences so dear to the hearts of the managers who pay him his princely salary.

His popularity in motion pictures is just as great as on the stage, for Fred Stone is a distinctive personality—a personality beloved by thousands upon thousands of theatre-goers throughout the country.

Fred Stone was born in Valmouth, Colo., and lived for a number of years in the very country in which his motion pictures have been filmed—in the wide open sweep of the Rockies and the rugged hills of Nevada and Wyoming. He was taken in a prairie schooner by his parents to the then wilderness town of Garden City, Kansas, when he was a young boy and it was here, too, that he acquired the western "way" that has characterized his work on the screen with high success.

When he was eight years old Fred Stone and his family were living in Wellington, Kansas. It was there that he attended a circus and saw a tight-rope walker perform. He determined to emulate him and had his mother sew some spangles on a suit of red flannel underwear. Young Stone donned his brilliant costume and practised daily on one of his mother's tautly drawn clothes lines—little dreaming that in later years the trick was to become one of his most popular feats on the stage.

One day, two years later, a wagon show visited Wellington, and Stone, unknown to the manager, ran up the tight-rope outside the side-show tent and stood there, poised in the air while the manager shouted to him to come down before he killed himself. Stone replied that he would come down if the manager would give him a job with the circus and the manager gladly promised. That same night the boy left home with the parental blessings and for several seasons toured the west.

These Letters Recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Will Interest You

For Your Own Good Please Read Them

Youngstown, Ohio.—"Last fall I began to feel mean and my back hurt me and I could hardly do my little bit of housework. I was played out when I would just sweep one room and would have to rest. I would have to put a cushion behind me when I would sit down and at night I could not sleep unless I had something under my back. I had awful cramps every month and was just nearly all in. Finally my husband said to me one day, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine?' and I said, 'I am willing to take anything if I could get well again.' So I took one bottle and a second one and felt better, and the neighbors asked me what I was doing and said, 'Surely it must be doing you good all right.' I have just finished my eighth bottle and I cannot express to you how I feel, the way I would like to. If you can use this letter you are welcome to it, and if any woman does not believe what I have written to be true, she can write to me and I will describe my condition to her as I have to you."—Mrs. ELMER HEASLEY, 141 S. "I was completely run down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy to get up when once I sat down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people and the majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

REDS ARE BACK OF REVOLT IN AFRICA

Captured Spies Say Money for Revolution Came From Abroad.

FIGHT ON FOR JOHANNESBURG

Strikers Striving to Capture Town Before Re-Enforcements Arrive—Attempt to Kill Gen. Smuts Fails—2,200 Prisoners Taken.

London, March 15.—An agency dispatch from Johannesburg says: "Through the capture of spies and documents it was learned that the money for the 'Red revolution' came from abroad."

"It is expected that peace will soon be restored."

It is believed in official circles, the message states, that there will continue to be small setbacks, such as the loss of isolated posts, but as regards the general result little doubt is felt.

Heavy casualties have been inflicted upon the revolutionaries, in addition to the capture of more than 2,200 of them.

Premier Smuts issued a statement, Reuters' Johannesburg correspondent says, declaring that the present revolutionary movement is the work of extremists, who are using the strike at the mines as a cloak for the dissemination of syndicalist views.

The premier states that the military position is well in hand, and that with the co-operation of the loyal citizens who are actively supporting the government it should not take long to re-establish peaceful conditions.

Johannesburg, March 15.—Government troops are advancing against the rebels in the mine fields under cover of heavy cannonading on all fronts, but the rebels are putting up stubborn resistance.

The revolutionaries are continuing their efforts to cut the Pretoria-Johannesburg railway.

Government troops have occupied Krugersdorp and Blerfontein. The rebels defended both places sternly, losing heavily.

Government leaders say the whole military situation now favors the government. Nearly 200 have been killed and more than 1,000 wounded in the battle.

All the western and northern side of the reef are now held by government troops under General Brit. Heavy fighting is anticipated in the Benoni and Brakpan regions.

Continuous attacks with airplanes are being carried out against the revolutionaries. The rebels are being bombed and fired upon with machine guns.

The total rebel prisoners captured by the government forces is 2,200, says an official communiqué issued by General Smuts, the South African premier, who is directing in person the military operations against the revolutionaries.

Pretoria, Union of South Africa, March 15.—Government forces are proceeding with great success against the revolutionaries, according to an official communiqué. The statement says: "The total number of prisoners taken in the operations in the central area is 2,200. Our forces occupied with but slight casualties the high ground around Westville. In the eastern area Maj. Gen. Van Deyter's troops forced the revolutionaries to retire into Benoni."

In the western area our forces reached Krugersdorp (22 miles northwest of Johannesburg) and are now pushing eastward. We have occupied Blerfontein, in British Bechuanaland."

WHY THE NAME "MOONSHINE"

In Earlier Years the Illicit Liquor Was Supposed to Be Made Only at Night.

America calls the liquor illicitly distilled, especially in the Alleghany mountains, "moonshine." The apparent reason is that it is believed to be distilled at night and secretly transported without payment of a tax or the authority of official permit. The fact is, of course, that the secret stills work as hard in day as at night.

England used the word in similar manner, though not in the same sense. Over there moonshine is liquor that has been smuggled into the country without payment of a tax. The smuggling is usually done by small boats from the continent, that land at lonely shores at night, and the cargo is unloaded by the light of the moon. It was this that gave the liquor its general name.

American moonshine is raw, unaged and often uncolored spirits. British moonshine may be the finest brandy from France, the choicest rum from Jamaica. In the British Isles, especially Ireland, the popular name for home-distilled spirits is "mountain dew," because it is in the hills that it is made, far from the prying eyes of the excise man.

It was in a court of law, and a witness was being cross-examined. Said Counsel—Why do you assert that the plaintiff is insane?

Counsel—Why?

"Because," answered the witness, with a complacent smile, "I am the prophet Mohammed myself."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Bishop Candler, of Atlanta, was condemning a certain theological controversy.

"Such idle controversies," he said, "remind me of the colored preacher who began a sermon with the words: 'Breddern and sistern, when de fust man, Adam, was created, he was made outer wet clay and set up agin de pulpit to dry.'"

"A member rose in the back of the church.

"Pawson," he said, incredulously, 'does you seriously state dat Adam was made outer wet clay and set up agin de pulpit to dry?'

"Den, pawson, who made de pulpit to dry?'

"Br'er Simcox, set down," said the parson severely. "Such fool questions as yours would upset any system of theology."

Eskimos Slaughter Musk Ox.

The Eskimo hunts the musk ox with dogs from which they do not flee. On sighting a small band he lets one or two dogs loose when the older animals immediately face outward in defensive formation with calves in the center, and prepare to give fight. As soon as the herd is thus "anchored" the Eskimo lets all his dogs loose and then proceeds to kill the musk ox with gun or bow and arrow. "The musk ox are very fierce, and if a wounded bull charges the Eskimo, the dogs in turn immediately attack him, which gives the hunter a chance to shoot a second time. In this way the Eskimo is able to dispatch the whole herd.

GAVE HIS NAME TO CALENDAR

Of all the long list of popes, Gregory XIII has probably left the most lasting monument, for he framed the calendar we use today, and it still bears his name. Gregory completed his calendar in 1582.

In more modern times a pope of outstanding personality was Pius IX, who in 1840 broke the age-old tradition that the pope should never preach a sermon. It happened in this way. A famous preacher of the time, Padre Ventura, whose eloquence attracted great crowds, had arranged to preach at a church in Rome, but at the last moment he was taken ill and the disconsolate people were about to disperse when suddenly the bells rang and it was announced that the sovereign pontiff had arrived in the church. The pope entered the pulpit and preached a sermon which the historians of the time has described as a "simple, good, plain sermon, easily intelligible to all." It was the first time a pope had preached for 300 years.

Timely.

Lord Frederick Hamilton tells some excellent stories in "Here, There and Everywhere." Here is one of Archbishop Magee of England: When he was a bishop of Peterborough he met, in the poorer quarters of the town, a sailor who had just landed out of a public house. The man recognized the bishop and, raising his hand in a gesture of mock benediction, called out, "The Lord be with you." "And with thy spirits," answered Magee.

CARE IN MARKETING BUTTER

To Insure Delivery of Satisfactory Product to Consumer It Should Be Well Wrapped.

Successful parcel-post marketing of butter requires that extreme care be taken to insure the delivery of a satisfactory product to the consumer, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. The following are a few of the important considerations to be observed to market butter successfully by parcel post:

It should be properly packed in neat and attractive packages.

The shipping container used should amply protect the butter from deterioration and damage.

The packages should bear the address of the sender and be properly addressed to the customer.

The most expeditious mail service from the mailing office should be used to insure delivery in the best condition.

Postal regulations provide that butter will be accepted for mailing to all offices to which, in the ordinary course of mail, it can be sent without spoiling when suitably wrapped or enclosed or when packed in crates, boxes, or other suitable containers to prevent the escape of anything from the package, and so constructed as to properly protect the contents.

COW TESTER AIDS DAIRYMAN

Wisconsin Farmer Woke Up by Results of Expert Obtained in Working With His Cows.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"I just wish to write a few words to let the farmers in general know what I thought of cow-testing associations a year ago and what I think of them now," writes a Wisconsin dairyman to a field agent of the dairy division, United States Department of Agriculture. "About a year ago I was approached on the subject, and, after some talk, I said: 'Go ahead; if you can shoot in forty or fifty dollars I can, too.' So in April, 1920, we organized; and to top it they elected me secretary of the association. I did not think much more about it until the tester came to my place the first time, and when I saw him at work I commenced to wake up.

"I had two cows that had freshened about three weeks before that, and both of them had better calves which I intended to sell for veal; but after the test was made I saw that those two cows were making more butterfat for the month than any of my other cows. I decided to keep the calves, and further took interest enough to weigh the milk from each cow in my herd; and now those two cows are at the top of the list for the whole association.

"You may ask, what about those two calves? Well, if you have $300 you might get them; but not for less than that; even if they are grades. Does testing pay? Well, I will say yes; and if I can keep the association going next year, you bet I will."

VALUE OF TEST ASSOCIATIONS

Information Obtained by Members Enables Them to Weed Out Unprofitable Animals.

There is plenty of evidence on file in the United States Department of Agriculture to convince anyone of the value of cow-testing associations as a means of developing profitable dairy herds. In all these associations records are kept of the amount of milk produced and feed consumed by each cow, and with this information the members of the association are able to weed out the poor producers of the herd to make room for the better calves of the cows that give the largest production of milk and butterfat. This practice, together with the use of purebred bulls, is the best and surest way of building up the dairy herd, say dairy specialists of the department.

300-Pound Cow Best.

It is much cheaper to milk and care for one cow giving 300 pounds of butterfat in a year than it is to milk and care for three cows giving 100 pounds of butterfat each, and the 300-pound cow will not cost as much as the three 100-pound cows.

Shelter for Dairy Cows. It isn't difficult to put a barn or shed in condition for dairy cows. The main essential is to provide a tight roof, a dry floor, and to admit fresh air and sunlight.

Land of Giant Geraniums. In Columbia, South America, the geraniums climb fifteen feet or more; sweet peas nod over ten-foot walls; roses bloom both in spring and in fall.
